Kathryn is an experienced trial attorney handling litigation in both federal and state courts. She represents corporate clients in complex tort litigation, particularly in the areas of FELA, personal injury defense, casualty and workers' compensation.

Kathryn joined Daley Mohan Groble from the City of Chicago Department of Law, where as Senior Counsel in the Federal Civil Rights Litigation Division, she developed extensive first-chair trial experience defending Chicago police officers in high-exposure matters. She supervised and guided attorneys on litigation and trial strategy for dozens of cases, as well as managed her own significant caseload from inception through trial. In almost 11 years of practice at the City, Kathryn tried fourteen trials to a jury verdict in state and federal venues involving wrongful death, excessive force, and malicious prosecution claims, among others. Additionally, Kathryn has considerable experience negotiating and obtaining favorable settlements on behalf of her clients.

Kathryn is an Adjunct Professor of Law at Northwestern University School of Law, where she teaches Introduction to Trial Advocacy, and also an adjunct Faculty Instructor of Loyola University School of Law's Intensive Trial Practice course.
